What now seems ages ago was the beginning of our whole school career—our first day at school, exactly twelve years ago. At first we didn't realize that we would climb the ladder of learning and that some day we would go out on our own. We were just happy-go-lucky youngsters, you might say, without a care in the world. That, however, is all changed now. In our steady evolution we have reached the top of our public school career, and we are not carefree, but serious young people going out into a world entirely at war.

We must have short memories, for in reminiscing about our school years, our high school career has seemed to be the most important part of the whole. Here in high school we have had more independence, such as choosing our course of study and in that way we have really started to work for ourselves. We also began our social and athletic life in those years. All these things and many more have prepared us for our jobs in the world and have taught us to be good citizens of our country.

Everything has changed in America in this last year. For the second time our happy, carefree young country has buckled down to war. So have the schools kept in step with the changing time, and in addition to our regular courses we have been learning about First Aid, Home Nursing, and Civilian Defense Work.

We are grateful to our Democracy for making these twelve years of our education possible and we are now ready, willing, and able to face the future.

REMEMBER

By Barbara Lariviere

Twelve short years to reach our goal,
And well do we remember—
It seemed a lifetime to us then,
When starting that September.

Do you remember your first desk,
With its tiny chair?
Remember your first teacher
Who taught the morning prayer?

A test mark, a report card,
And a holiday vacation?
The pesky teacher's pet,
And that final examination?

Staying after school
On a lazy summer day?
Trying for a part
In your first school play?

The new girl and boy
Who were given much attention?
The first time you were disciplined
And given a detention?

The one you had your eye upon
As your first date?
The first prom you attended,
And got in so late?

Talking to a friend of yours
From across the aisle?
Wearing the most "awful" things
Just to keep in style?

The day there was no school
Because of so much rain?
The day that you were absent
And evidence was plain?

Remember these in coming days,
Among the many more
While your future, worldly plans
You're putting into store.

If your luck has happened
To be either good or bad,
Look back to these grand times
During schooldays you have had.

And try so hard to make
That good old O. H. S.
The proudest one of all,
Of you and your success!

ADDRESS OF WELCOME

By Merrick Bigelow

We, the class of 1942, welcome you—parents, teachers, friends and underclassmates—to enjoy our Class Day program today and our Graduation exercises on Wednesday night.

This afternoon we will tell you about the carefree side of our school life, but our Graduation exercises will show you our more serious moments.

We realize that it is impossible to repay the loyal parents, teachers and friends who have made our school years enjoyable, but we will prove that we can be good citizens by making ourselves useful to the world of the future. In our twelve years of schooling, we have gained the knowledge necessary for future study, for business in civilian life, or any branch we may choose in the defense of our country.

There have been times, we must admit, when our duties and the penalties inflicted upon us have seemed unfair, but at this point in our lives we realize fully that all was for our own benefit.

Again we welcome you, and hope our Class day and Graduation exercises will be enjoyed and mean as much to you as they do to us.

CLASS HISTORY

By Claire Nesta

At last, on September 12, 1938, we became Freshmen. The Main Room was completely filled with eighty-seven eager, shiny faces—the biggest class in the history of Oxford High School! It wasn't until about a few days after, when we began bumping into ourselves, that we decided we should have a new and bigger high school. Such ideas were called fantastic by our upper classmen and it took four years to find out that they were true.

Typical Freshmen were we—all the boys with knee pants and the girls not taller than four feet, two inches.

The year started off grand, but on September 21, something terrible happened—the hurrricane. It was a pity to lose all those big trees, and we were so sorry to miss a few days of school.

We were good little Freshmen, even though Drucker did seem to have a date with the detention teacher nightly. The year flew by and in June we decided to go to that ever-popular place—Purgatory—for our class picnic. What a grand time we had roasting hot dogs—and what a grand time Mr. O'Connor had eating them!

That year, our assistant-principal, Mr. McGovern, and our science teacher, Mr. Shappy, left our school for positions in a brand new Providence high school. We have missed them for the past three years.

We were no longer inexperienced Freshmen; we had become sedate little Sophomores. Bobby Browning had finally stopped wearing knickers and Margie Kemp had grown a couple of inches.

Everything was different this year. Mr. O'Connor had elevated to assistant-principal and Miss Kennedy was made Dean of Girls. Our two new teachers were Miss Harris and Miss Davis.

Our class was still so large that we had to be separated. Half of us were with Miss Harris and the others were with Miss Kinniery. At first, we were shy of our upper classmen, but it was not long before "Red" Hale was leading the jitterbugs around.

Three new girls joined our class this year—Elizabeth and Barbara Lariviere, and Alice Kiley. We soon had them just as silly as ourselves.

As usual, "come February," we were all jittery about midyear exams. Just when we were about to suffer for a whole week, there arose a terrible blizzard. It was really wonderful, for it caused the cancellation of our exams; and not only that—since then they have been for college prep students only.

Again in June, we went to Purgatory. That was the year we almost lost "Biggie" in one of the caves, but we found him just before starting for home.

We think Moses Brown was fortunate to take our president, Stevie Thayer, and our very popular friend, Dick Hale, from us.

Back we came in September, 1940, for our Junior year at Oxford High with two new members—Doris Seastrom and Evelyn Kane. Our officers were: President, Richard Chaffee; vice-president, Merrick Bigelow; secretary, Richard Gaulin; and treasurer, Mona Merriam.

After seeing Mae Guertin in the fall play, "The Spy," we agree that acting should be her career.

Lil Prefontaine did a wonderful job as captain of the basketball team this year, while Charlie Ashton made a very efficient boys' manager. Bea Duquette and Lil Prefontaine, both very worthy of it, shared the honors of the Dr. Fletcher Award.

Miss Hand must have known that we had, in Richard Berggren, another Rubinoff, so she ups and starts a school orchestra. It has become mighty popular.

But the greatest event of this year was, of course, our Junior Prom. The spirit of it was wonderful and everyone had a perfect time.

Then came our class picnic. This year it was not Purgatory—it was Boston with Miss Kennedy! That is an occasion we shall never forget. Bertha Ritchie almost fell out of the roller coaster but Stanley Eames saved her. Miss Kennedy took movies of everything we did. When we saw them, we had to look twice. We thought Dick Chaffee was Stirling Hayden.

When we came back this year to be those so-called dignified Seniors, the school didn't seem crowded at all. The reason was because practically all the boys were out picking apples. That's why the school was so peaceful. After a few weeks, however, they came back to annoy us. We have fifty-two in the class this year for Agnes Turbidy has joined our happy family. This year's officers are: President, Merrick Bigelow; vice-president, Robert Browning; secretary, Mona Merriam; and treasurer, Lillian Prefontaine.

The fall play, "China Boy," was a great success. Charlie "Daddy" Ashton and Richard "Romancer" Berggren did wonderfully in it.

On Monday, December 8, 1941, we came to school, all realizing that, besides our school work, we would have to do our part to help win this war. We have done this in the form of Red Cross work and other voluntary services. We are thankful to Miss Winter for organizing a girls' knitting club. It's quite an art to push knitting needles the right way. If you don't think so ask Agnes Turbidy.

Shortly after Christmas, we were very proud of our teacher, Mr. Walter Browning, who enlisted in our United States Navy. Miss Gahagan then joined our teachers' staff.

As captain, Bea Duquette led the girls through a successful basketball season.

This year Sylvia Taraskiewicz received the Daughters of the American Revolution award. We are certainly proud of you, Sylvia.

March 17 was a joyous night for us; this was the night of the Junior Prom which was given in our honor. Thank you, Juniors, for a very lovely evening.

The name of the Senior play was "Why Worry." The cast included Richard Chaffee, Doris Seastrom, Merrick Bigelow, Richard Berggron, Ozias LeBlanc, Lillian Prefontaine, Beatrice Duquette, Marjorie Kemp, Roland Cloutier and Betty Snyder. We hand it to them, for they had us roaring with laughter.

We all know that J. Carroll Brown must have broken fifty-two cameras around April, for that's when he took our pictures.

After graduation, on Wednesday, we shall go out into the world and hope it will be better because we live in it.

CLASS PROPHECY

By Richard Druker

Contact! Flight 42 leaving Randolph Field headed for central New England, altitude 5000 feet, speed 425 m.p.h., visibility clear . . . that is all. The plane was riding smoothly when out of nowhere I fell into a spin and crashed to earth, I know not where. Our bodies were strewn all over creation. I found my soul trying to rise higher, higher toward heaven, then it, too, fell into a spin. Well, I think I'll look at my old clasmates, the pupils of '42, before I go. It has been twenty years since I have seen or heard of any of my pals in pursuit of knowledge at Old Oxford High.

My soul stops at the most progressive city in Massachusetts, Oxford. I walked through the beautiful park just finished a few years ago. Oxford has many tall buildings, wide streets and many people. Its population now exceeds 32,000, including the animals in the zoo.

Feeling very tired I stopped at the City Hotel to lodge. I was penniless and very hungry so I called the manager. After a few minutes of nervous waiting the manager approached me. I hadn't recognized him at first but he was my old pal, Brendon Donovan. Just imagine it, a manager of the largest hotel in Massachusetts. After we had a long chat and food, he decided to show me the high spots of the city. I failed to mention it but Bren is married now and has nine boys, just enough for a ball team with him as manager.

We proceeded on our tour and stopped at the best night spot in town. My heart almost scuttled itself when I looked on the program and found Charlie Ashton and his orchestra, with vocalist, Doris Seastrom. Dot and Charlie are now on their fifth year of marriage and have taken the same number of honeymoons.

We leave this night spot in the wee hours of the morning and meet Stanley Eames and Barbara Lariviere. They have filed marriage intentions. Stan is now a foreman at the Ajax Frigidaire Co. He claims it's easier than ice.

We walked farther down the street and I noticed the beautiful super-market, the first one New England Stores has ever had. It was managed and operated by Joe Coonan and Sons. Joe is a big boy now and is married to a southern girl. He has four boys who help him run his super-market at a slight profit.

Our next stop was at a beauty shop. It was the fanciest one I have ever seen. This shop is operated by Sylvia Taraskiewicz and Bertha Ritchie.

I failed to mention it, but Oxford has a municipal form of government with the mayor at its head. The mayor is Alfred Chaffee. Al has helped the city a great deal. He is going on his fifth term and has given up his box shop to devote his full time to running the city.

The newspapers had just come off the press. This city has two newspapers. Richard Chaffee is editor in chief of the Oxford Bugle and has built up the circulation well over the 10,000 mark. Dick has a few classmates with him now and can attribute his success to Mona Merriam's editorials and feature stories. Mona spends her spare time writing short stories and plays. Rita Piette also works at the Bugle. Rita writes a nation-wide syndicate of America's favorite comic strip, Rio Rita.

We walked farther down the street and noticed a new skyscraper in the building process. It is to be three inches taller than the Empire State Building. I turned eleven different colors when I noticed the sign to read Merrick Bigelow & Son, Builders. I had never dreamed that Biggie would go that high up the ladder.

I noticed another sign; it went something like this: Browning, Carlson, Leblanc, Attorneys at Law. They have built up a very fine business. They all happen to be the city's most eligible bachelors.

The next building was the Hey Department Stores, Inc. Don has stores all along the Atlantic Coast and dude ranches all along the Pacific Coast.

We approached three very good looking damsels. They were Virginia Thompson, Ellen Parkis, and Janice Willey. This threesome had traveled all over the world and is now ready to settle down, I notice.

Bren told me the next building was the Winski Bowling Garden. Johnny runs bowling five days a week, wrestling matches, two days a week, and a family of four the rest of the time.

I noticed the elaborate two-story busses run by Francis Donnellan. Duck has twenty-two busses in his concern and his jitneys travel all over New England. Donnellan is still single, but houses fourteen dogs in his house to keep him company. I still say one wife is cheaper to run than fourteen dogs.

A little farther down the street I noticed a massive row of elms and behind them the new Oxford College of Musical Knowledge. Reuben Gionet runs this school which is the largest in Worcester County. Rufus is sometimes known as Kay Kyser, Junior, with much more humor.

Across the street was Madame Eva Benoit, beautifying expert with the largest salon in Massachusetts. Little Eva does a handsome business although unmarried yet.

We passed a large playhouse and I noticed the billboard to read Miss Mae Babbitt, The Opera's Habit. Mae has been on the stage six successful seasons and is opera's foremost singer. Mae sings opera, than translates it in American. The first person ever to do this, it has revolutionized opera and Mae.

Our next stop was at the Kane Candy Shop.

Evvy always was a sweet little sugar, now she's selling it. She has intentions to enlarge the store as soon as she gets married. The engagement has only six more months to run—lucky Bill.

The next stop was at the Roger's Rabbit Meat Store. Kenny has a store in the city and a farm in the country. Johnny Jascoviak runs the farm at a profit. Johnny is very modern; he is a scientific farmer, and a scientific talker. Kenny devotes his spare and private time to rabbits, poor things.

Oxford's District Attorney is Raymond Dufney and well deserves the position. Ray likes to chase criminals and still does chase the opposite sex.

We walked for a few hundred yards admiring the new college, not to mention the high school built in 1950, and still in condition too.

I thought it might be Easter because I noticed the styles had changed, especially on the ladies, after the war. A group of young ladies approached us, and I thought the age of beauty had passed but was I mistaken! This group was made up of Beatrice Duquette—Bea is enjoying her housework immensely since she tied the knot; Betty Snyder—Bet is married now and has a family of five little red-heads, lucky kid; Claire Nesta—Claire has changed so much that Bren had to give me an introduction. Claire doesn't like her housework but it's the job of a good wife. Lillian Prefontaine was next. Lil hasn't grown an inch. She also does the work at home as it's the custom of a good wife. Betty Lariviere was next. She doesn't keep house but has the first installment on one. She has the ring and needs only the license.

It must have been five o'clock because the streets became crowded. In that crowd I met June Marcoux. Juney is now a wife, leading a happy life.

During the rush we met Arlene Columbus, Mary Brennan, Helen Butler, and Dorothy Naramore. This foursome is still single and happy. They work as bookkeepers in Oxford's Chamber of Commerce.

Oxford even has a hospital, much larger than the state hospital. I found out that Mae Guertin was head nurse at this institution. She has served four years with the Red Cross overseas and deserves such an honor.

Oxford has a Five & Ten Cent Savings Bank, three times as large as the one in 1903. Richard Gaulin is its capable president. Dick is also the town's leading bowler outside of Winski's 1352 in the tournament.

The town's leading tailor shop is run by Harold Shapiro and is very progressive. Chippie has given away a diamond and it's not for her birthday either.

Oxford is quite a baseball town: it has sent Roland Cloutier to help the Red Sox win the pennant. Dreamy spent two seasons in class D but has shown such talent that Jimmy Foxx was finally forced to retire. Rolly is still single to my surprise as he was once the senior wolf.

Richard Berggren is a chemical engineer employed by the World Chemical Laboratories, Inc. Bergy has shown his ambition and has intentions to settle down, I gather.

Adeline Antkowiak has risen to her heights as she is the head hostess on the American Airlines. Adeline has been successful as a hostess and will soon retire with a pension.

Myrtle Eccleston is secretary to Dick Gaulin at the bank and also has spent several years as a housewife.

We walked farther down street and I noticed the dress shop owned by Doris Grammo. Doris' shop is the fashion center of the city. Doris is happy, although alone, but expects to make it a partnership in the near future.

On our way back to the hotel we met Marjorie Kemp. Marj is happy and is secretary to the Chief of Police who is her boss at work, but vice-versa at home.

It was getting rather late so we started back to the hotel. As we entered we met Norleen Lebo and Agnes Turbidy registering at the office. Agnes and Norleen are traveling saleslaadies who enjoy canvassing the country. Something new has been added to their third finger, left, I noticed.

That finishes my version of the prophecy of '42. On my way back to the hereafter, I'll stop in and ask Father Time how close to fortune I have come. In your spare time, buy defense stamps and bonds to insure victory.

CLASS WILL

We, the class of '42, do solemnly submit our most cherished possessions to those who will next year replace our famed selves in that most dignified room of rooms, room 6. This will revoke all previous wills made by us.

Being immune and impervious to mental agitations, we do graciously give, not bequeath, for our remains are far from being blown around by the winds of time, glorious characteristics and worldly goods to the following deserving individuals:

To Theresa Agababian: Adeline Antkowiak's ability to get free taxi service home when a test comes unexpected.

To Theresa Amiot: Bertha Ritchie and Sylvia Taraskiewicz's artistic ability and also a raise next term for her help to Miss Hand.

To Shirley Birmingham: Helen Butler's position of being Miss Winter's errand girl.

To Raymond Brodeur: Stanley Eames' ability to expand his muscles to such great magnitude.

To Alvin Chickering: Raymond Duffy's ability to keep his car running and in good parking order.

To Richard Clark: We leave Kenneth Rogers' curls, so he won't have to comb his hair so often.

To George Cloutier: Roland's ability to take the "cream of the crop" to school dances.

To Jean Cypher: Rita Piette's ability to sing during study periods without getting caught.

To Ruth Desy: Marjorie Kemp's ability to sit in perfect isolation while other fronts are being bombarded by intensive whispering.

To June Gardner: Norleen Lebo and Doris Seastrom's ability to cut a rug, but we hope with less damage.

To Gladys Halsdorff: Mary Brennan's trusted character in her seat in the back of the room.

To Russell Harrington: Richard Berggren's ability to take on weight during his Senior year.

To Eleanor Healy: Arlene Columbus' ability to be seen and distinctly heard.

To Anna Hill: Dorothy Naramore's ability to manufacture her own sweaters during school hours.

To Ella Jaskoviak: Evelyn Kane's ability to hold a boy friend at such a great distance.

To Emily Kemp: Claire Nesta's long hair which will serve as a throwline to catch some lucky fish.

To Harold King: Francis Donnellan's position of being the boy's adviser on date night.

To Lillian LaFleche: Beatrice Duquette's good natured qualities and intellect.

To Donald Leduc: John Winsky's attempts to raise a mustache since he was bequeathed a cat.

To William Mahota: Merrick Bigelow's luck when it comes time for a school dance.

To Clarence McCarthy: Robert Browning's ability to collect money from STATIC debtors.

To Patricia Mercier: Myrtle Eccleston's ability to carry on undercover conversations.

To Meriam Merrick: Betty Snyder's position as red-head of the class and star member of the basketball team.

To Martha Oborne: Lillian Prefontaine's position of being dancing instructor at the tea dances.

To James Pariseau: Richard Chaffee's intellectual talents and progressive ways.

To Mary Powers: Janice Willey's blonde hair and quietness.

To Roger Pytko: Brendon Donovan's seat which can be converted into a sofa at the push of a button.

To Richard Rheault: Donald Hey's seat of honor in the midst of feminine companions.

To Richard Rodier: Only the enjoyment he would receive in the Senior room if he didn't skip the Senior year.

To Joan Sanderson: Ellen Parkis' ability to transform her facial expression whenever a reflex action occurs.

To John Skarbeck: John Jaskoviak's position as the room's first-class agriculturist.

To Raymond Stoll: Richard Druker's position as class comedian and his ability to get along with the teachers, sometimes.

To Madelyn Strack: Doris Grammo's position of being one of the quietest girls in the class.

To Marion Thompson: Eva Benoit's ability to be heard and not seen.

To Elizabeth Tomasion: Mona Merriam's secretarial ability.

To James Waldron: Harold Shapiro's position of being shy but bold in action.

To Thomas Waldron: Alfred Chaffee's unique ability never to bother with the feminine sex.

To Clyde Willey: Ozias LeBlanc's studious habits, and intellectual interests.

SOPOMORES:

To Helen Babbitt: Mae's ability to keep a steady boy friend.

To Arthur Gardner: Leonard Carlson's position as the class midget and Richard Gaulin's quietness.

To Claire Sands: Barbara and Betty LaRiviere's charming characteristics and politeness.

To Marion Strader: Virginia Thompson's dancing technique.

To Herbert Buxton: Joe Coonan's height and good naturedness.

To Constance Prefontaine: Agnes Turbidy's ability to be attractive but dangerous.

To George Berthiaume: Reuben Gionet's ability to remain quiet no matter how much noise is going around him.

To Doris Dimock: Mae Guertin's front seat in the English class, where her tiny voice can be distinctly analyzed.

In Witness Whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and affixed my seal this fifteenth day of June in the year One thousand nine hundred and forty-two.

CHARLES ASHTON,
For Class of 1942.

Witnesses:

THE THREE AND ONE HALF INK SPOTS
THE GREEN HORNET

The foregoing instrument was on the fifteenth day of June, 1942, signed, sealed, published and declared by the Class of "42," the testator therein named, as and for their last Will and Testament, in the presence of us, the undersigned, who at their request, and in their presence, and in the presence of each other, have hereunto set our names as witnesses.

THE GREEN HORNET

CLASS GIFTS

Joseph Coonan
To Joe, who works in a store and waits on all the pretty dames,
We give this pad of paper so he'll not forget their names.

Richard Drucker
Now Richard likes to loaf and is seen in Leahy's every day,
So we give him this magazine to help pass the time away.

Roland Cloutier
To Roland who works in a grocery store and waits on people all the while,
We give this tube of lipstick, for a super-special A & P smile.

Francis Donnellan
To "Frannie" who occasionally bums a ride, we give this wooden thumb,
So in spite of the gasoline shortage, the rides will continue to come.

Leonard Carlson
To Lenny, our Baseball star, who is bound to become famous any time now,
We give this automobile, so with the girls he'll be a wow!

Richard Chaffee
To "Dick," a jitterbug, who is a hot one on his toes,
We give this little powder puff to keep the shine off his nose.

Robert Browning
To "Bob," our rugged senior, who makes a hit with all the girls,
We give these little bows to tuck among his lovely curls.

Agnes Turbidy
To Agnes, a Websterite, who never fails to be a little late,
We give this small alarm clock so she'll never miss a date.

Rita Piette
To Rita, who somebody's pretty secretary will be,
We donate this ticket so she will get to work free.

John Winsky
To John, the working man of the class,
We give this piggy bank, so his savings will last.

Urbain Gionet
A little birdie told us, "Reuben" was a swell musician,
So we give this grand piano in hopes we'll have an exhibition.

Richard Berggren
To "Dick" who has a beautiful wave in his hair each day,
We give this bottle of wave set, so he may keep it just that way.

Ozias Leblanc
To Ozias who buys the teachers' lunch each noon you know,
We give this dime, our appreciation to show.

Beatrice Duquette
To Bea, who lives just beyond the bridge, we give this little flashlight,
So the Boogie Man will not scare her, when she walks home alone at night.

Evelyn Kane
To Eve, our class comedian, who is often seen with Bill,
We give this telephone, so things between them will not chill.

Helen Butler
To Helen we give this tea set, so when her boy friends call at night,
She will be a smart hostess, and satisfy their appetite.

Myrtle Eccleston
We give this pen to Myrtle, 'cause we think she should be writing
To her friend in the army, to keep his spirits up while fighting.

Donald Hey
To Don who likes to go riding on his horse,
We give this buggy so he can take his girl along.

Elizabeth Lariviere
To Betty who works in a bank in Webster,
We give this gun so she may never fear a gangster.

Harold Shapiro
We give this "Sweetheart" soap to "Chippy," to remind him of his smooth complexion,
And hope that he will go in the right direction.

Arlene Columbus
To Arlene, a quiet senior, the class extends their deepest wishes
And present her with this can opener to use when she becomes Mrs.

Sylvia Taraskiewicz
To "Syl" who always looks very neat and fair,
We give these pretty flowers to wear in her hair.

Dorothy Naramore
To "Dot" who, judging by her left hand, has but one thing on her mind
We give this tube of shaving cream and hope he uses that kind.

Kenneth Rogers
We know, through past experience, how "Kenney" loves his cake and candy,
But we thought, if he ran short, these crackers might come in handy!

June Marcoux
We know that Junie's one who likes to do a lot of walkin'
So we'll supply her with these corn pads to keep her dogs from talkin'.

Marjorie Kemp
Little Marjorie likes to dance, and finds old-fashions her selection;
But Woodstock's filled with danger, so we give this gun for her protection.

Richard Gaulin
To "Dick" who likes to drive a car through thick and thin,
We give these driver's rules, and hope he'll never be "pulled in."

Merrick Bigelow
To "Biggy," our happy-go-lucky senior, who likes to go dancing late at night,
We give this Jergen's Lotion so his hands won't look a sight!

John Jaskoviak
To John who thinks he'll marry and settle down for evermore,
We give these safety pins so he'll not have to bother the people next door.

Charles Ashton
To Charles, our ladies man, who thinks a blackout's a lot of fun,
We give this little watchdog so from scary things he will not run.

Eva Benoit
To Eva, seldom seen without her friend Margie, too,
So they may always stick together, we gladly give this can of glue.

Lillian Prefontaine
This genuine imitation engagement ring we give to "Lil,"
'Cuz we know if we don't somebody else will.

Doris Grammo
To Doris, our good-natured lass, who really wants to be tall,
We give this pair of heels and pray she will be, after all.

Mona Merriam
To Mona, our brilliant and very charming farmerette,
We thought we'd be real generous and give her this cow to be her pet.

Stanley Eames
To Stanley, our modern Romeo, who goes out with many a gal,
We give this Kewpie doll, so he may have a steady pal.

Adeline Antkowiak
For Adeline, a pretty lass, often seen riding in her Oldsmobile,
We have this tire in spite of the shortage, so she may continue her fun with the wheel.

Mae Babbitt
To Mae, who keeps time with a watch from Joe,
We give her this "jeep"
So that she may never be slow.

Doris Seastrom:
To Doris, who lives to dance,
We give these slippers so she may have a better chance.

Virginia Thompson
To Ginny who likes record-player selections,
We give this new one to add to her collection.

Mary Brennan
To Mary who likes to eat candy,
We give this bar so she may always have some handy.

Brendon Donovan
To Brendon who works in a store,
We give this book of instructions so he can sell all the more.

Alfred Chaffee
To Alfred who seldom says a word,
We give this horn so he may more often be heard.

Raymond Dufney
To Raymond, who has a car,
We give this tire
So that he may ride far.

Mae Guertin
To Mae who always comes in late,
We give this little watch
So that she may keep a 9 o'clock date.

Janice Willey
To Janice, who purls and knits,
We give these needles
So that she may persist.

Betty Snyder
To Betty, who is never seen without Curt,
We give her this compact
So she may look pert.

Norleen Lebo:
To Norleen who is small,
We give her these vitamin pills
So that she may grow tall.

Claire Nesta:
To Claire who is working at Bates,
We give this eraser
So she won't make mistakes.

Ellen Parkis
To Ellen whose personality is A-1,
We give her this "Mademoiselle"
So that she may keep it thus.

Barbara Lariviere
To Barbara who likes to design,
We give her these crayons
To pass the time.
